

The Engineers Journal goes online

The online Engineers Journal has been launched and can be accessed now at www.engineersjournal.ie. The online version is part of Engineers Ireland's ongoing development of its web offering and contains the same mix of features and news that readers of the print Journal will be familiar with but in a format that allows the busy engineer to scan a range of topics and issues quickly and conveniently. The online format takes full advantage of the immediacy of the internet. For instance, it allows for speedy updates of the Programme of Events which details the activities of Engineers Ireland's Regions, Divisions and Societies across the country. Now you can log on to www.engineersjournal.ie and find out instantly what presentations, workshops, golf outings etc are being organised by the Regions, Divisions and Societies in your area. Log on to the www.engineersjournal.ie and let us know what you enjoy, what you don't like and what you'd like to see covered in the future.

Please email your reactions, views and comments on the online edition to: journal@engineersireland.ie

Fresh start in training from Citrus

Citrus Training and Consulting is a new Cork business providing training solutions to the business, pharmaceutical, manufacturing, engineering and construction sectors. Founded by Jennifer Forde and Mike Derham, Citrus has over 10 years' experience built up in the training division of Cadco Ltd and their combination of technical skills and market experience enables the new business to offer a broad range of training courses.

Anne O'Leary, founder and managing director of Cadco, says: "I am delighted that Mike and Jennifer have taken the initiative in starting this new business, as with the sale of Cadco's business to Computer 2000, it was appropriate for the training and consulting business to separate. We are delighted that the knowledge and expertise built up over the last 10 years has a new home in Citrus. I am confident that customers will continue to benefit from high-quality solutions and excellent service in the hands of Jennifer and Mike." With an already established loyal client base, the new company aims to build on this with new courses customised to suit the challenges facing companies both on the technical and the people-management side.

Citrus courses include a full range of Microsoft Office, ECDL, CAD, project management, web editing, soft skills and health and safety courses at introductory, intermediate and advanced levels. Courses are available in-house but open courses are also being offered at Citrus' Cork premises.
